

PUR

PURPOSELY, adv. [from purpose.] By design; by intention. Being the instrument which God hath purposefully framed, thereby to work the knowledge of salvation in the hearts of men, what cause is there wherefore it should not be acknowledged a most apt mean? Hooker.
I have purposefully avoided to speak any thing concerning the treatment due to such persons. Addison.
In composing this discourse, I purposefully declined all offensive and displeasing truths. Atterbury.
The vulgar thus through imitation err,
As oft the learned by being singular;
So much they scorn the crowd, that if the throng
By chance go right, they purposefully go wrong. Pope.
PURPRISER, n. f. [purpuris, old Fr. purpurisum, law Lat.] A clove or inclosure; as also the whole compass of a manour.
The place of justice is hallowed; and therefore not only the bench, but the foot-pace and precincts, and purpriser ought to be preserved without corruption. Bacon's Essays.
PURR, n. f. A fcat lark. Angus.
TO PURR, v. a. To murmur as a cat or leopard in pleasure.
PURSE, n. f. [burse, Fr. purse, Welsh.] A small bag in which money is contained.
She bears the purse too; she is a region in Guiana all gold and bounty. Shakep. Merry Wives of Windsor.
Shall the son of England prove a thief,
And take purse? Shakep. Henry IV.
He sent certain of the chief prisoners, richly apparelled with their purse full of money, into the city. Knolles.
I will give him the thousand pieces, and, to his great surprise, present him with another purse of the same value. Add.
TO PURSE, v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To put into a purse.
I am spell-cought by Philidel,
And purse within a net. Dryden.
I purse it up, but little reck'ning made,
'Till now that this extremity compell'd,
I find it true. Milton.
2. To contract as a purse.
Thou cried'st,
And didst contract and purse thy brow together,
As if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain
Some horrible conceit. Shakep. Othello.
PURSENET, n. f. [purse and net.] A net of which the mouth is drawn together by a string.
Conies are taken by pursetnets in their burrows. Mortimer.
PURSEPROUD, adj. [purse and proud.] Puffed up with money.
PURSER, n. f. [from purse.] The paymaster of a ship.

PURSEIVENESS, n. f. [from purse.] Shortness of breath.
PURSLAIN, n. f. [portulaca, Lat.] A plant.
The flower of purslain consists of many leaves, which expand in form of a rose, out of whose flower-cup, which consists of one leaf, arises the pointal, which, together with the flower-cup, becomes a fruit, for the most part oval, full of small seeds; and furnished with two shells or husks at top; of which the outer one, which was the part of the flower-cup that was split in two, opens first; and the inner one, which is the pointal enlarged, opens last, doubly and transversely, while the lower part of the flower-cup adheres to the foot-stalk. Miller.
The medicaments, proper to diminish the milk, are lettuce, purslain and endive. Wifeman's Surgery.
PURSUABLE, adj. [from purse.] What may be pursued.
PURSUANCE, n. f. [from purse.] Prosecution; process.
PURSUANT, adj. [from purse.] Done in consequence or prosecution of any thing.
TO PURSUE, v. a. [pour-suivre, Fr.]
1. To chase; to follow in hostility.
Love like a shadow flies, when substance love pursues;
Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues. Shakep.
When Abram heard that his brother was taken captive, he armed his trained servants, and pursued. Gen. xiv. 14.
To thy speed add wings,
Left with a whip of scorpions I pursue. Milton.
Thy lingering,
2. To prosecute; to continue.
As righteousness tendeth to life; so he that pursueth evil,
pursueth it to his own death. Prov. xii. 19.
Infatiate to pursue
Vain war with heaven. Milton.
I will pursue
This ancient story, whether false or true. Dryden.
When men pursue their thoughts of space, they stop at the confines of body, as if space were there at an end. Locke.
3. To imitate; to follow as an example.
The fame of ancient matrons you pursue,
And stand a blameless pattern to the new. Dryden.
4. To endeavour to attain.
Let us not then pursue
Splendid vassalage. Milton.
We happiness pursue; we fly from pain;
Yet the pursuit, and yet the flight is vain. Prior.

PUR

TO PURSUE, v. n. To go on; to proceed.
I have, purpues Carneades, wondered chymists should not consider.
PURSUER, n. f. [from purse.] One who follows in hostility.
Fled with the rest,
And falling from a hill he was to bruis'd,
That the pursuers took him. Shakep. Henry IV.
His swift pursuers from heav'n's gates discern
Th' advantage, and descending tread us down
Thus drooping. Milton's Par. Lost, b. i.
Like a declining statesman left forlorn
To his friends pity and pursuers scorn. Denham.
PURSUITE, n. f. [pour-suite, Fr.]
1. The act of following with hostile intention.
Arm, warriors, arm for fight! the foe at hand,
Whom fled we thought, will have us long pursuit. Milton.
2. Endeavour to attain.
This means they long propos'd, but little gain'd,
Yet after much pursuit, at length obtain'd. Dryden.
Its honours and vanities are continually passing before him, and inviting his pursuit. Rogers.
He has annexed a secret pleasure to the idea of any thing that is new or uncommon, that he might encourage us in the pursuit after knowledge, and engage us to search into the wonders of his creation. Addison.
The will, free from the determination of such desires, is left to the pursuit of nearer satisfactions, and to the removal of those uneasinesses it feels in its longings after them. Locke.
3. Prosecution.
He concluded with sighs and tears, to conjure them, that they would no more press him to give his consent to a thing so contrary to his reason, the execution whereof would break his heart, and that they would give over further pursuit of it. Clarendon.
PURSUIVANT, n. f. [pour-suivant, Fr.] A state messenger; an attendant on the heralds.
How oft do they with golden pinions cleave
The fitting skies, like flying pursuivants. Fairy Queen.
Pursuivants he often for them sent. Chaucer.
These grey locks, the pursuivants of death,
Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer. Shakep.
Send out a pursuivant at arms
To Stanley's regiment; bid him bring his power
Before sun-rising. Shakep. Richard III.
For helmets, crests, mantles, and supporters, I leave the reader to Edmond Bolton, Gerard Leigh, John Ferne, and John Guillim Portsmouth, pursuivants of arms, who have diligently laboured in armory. Candian's Remains.
The pursuivants came next,
And like the heralds each his cushion bore. Dryden.
PURSY, adj. [purssif, Fr.] Shortbreathed and fat.
In the fatness of these pursty times,
Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg,
Yea croud and woo for leave to do it good. Shakep.
Now breathless wrong
Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease,
And pursty insolence shall break his wind
With fear and horrid flight. Shakep. Timon of Athens.
By these, the Medes
Perfume their breaths, and cure old pursty men. Temple.
An hostels dowager,
Grown fat and pursty by retail
Of pots of beer and bottl'd ale. Hudibras, p. iii.
PURTEANCE, n. f. [appertenance, Fr.] The pluck of an animal.
Roast the lamb with fire, his head with his legs and with the portenance thereof. Ex. xii. 9.
The shaft against a rib did glance,
And gall'd him in the portenance. Hudibras, p. i.
TO PURVEY, v. a. [pourvoir, Fr.]
1. To provide with conveniences. This sense is now not in use.
Give no odds to your foes, but do purvey
Yourself of sword before that bloody day. Fa. Queen.
His house with all convenience was purvey'd,
The rest he found. Dryden.
2. To procure.
What though from outmost land and sea purvey'd
For him; each rarer tributary life
Bleeds not. Tobson's Summer.
TO PURVEY, v. n. To buy in provisions.
I the praise
Yield thee, so well this day thou hast purvey'd. Milton.
PURVEYANCE, n. f. [from purvey.]
1. Provision.
Whence mounting up, they find purveyance meet
Of all, that royal princes court became. Fa. Queen.
2. Procurement of victuals.
Some lands be more changeable than others; as for their lying near to the borders, or because of great and continual purveyances that are made upon them. Bacon.

PURVEYOR.

PUS

PURVEYOR, n. f. [from purvey.]
1. One that provides victuals.
The purveyors or victuallers are much to be condemned, as not a little faulty in that behalf. Raleigh.
2. A procurer; a pimp.
These women are such cunning purveyors!
Mark where their appetites have once been pleased,
The same resemblance in a younger lover,
Lies brooding in their fancies the same pleasures. Dryden.
The stranger, ravish'd at his good fortune, is introduced to some imaginary title; for this purveyor has her representatives of some of the finest ladies. Addison.
PURVIEW, n. f. [pourveu, French.] Provifo; providing clause.
Though the petition expresses only treason and felony, yet the act is general against all appeals in parliament; and many times the purview of an act is larger than the preamble or the petition. Hale's Common Law of England.
PURULENCE, n. f. [from purulent.] Generation of pus or purulency, matter.
Consumptions are induced by purulency in any of the viscera. Arbutnot on Diet.
PURULENT, adj. [purulent, Fr. purulentus, Lat.] Consisting of pus or the running of wounds.
A carcase of man is most infectious and odious to man, and purulent matter of wounds to found flesh. Bacon.
It spews a filthy froth
Of matter purulent and white,
Which happen'd on the skin to light,
And there corrupting on a wound,
Spreads leprosy. Swift's Miscel.
An acrimonious or purulent matter, stagnating in some organ, is more easily deposited upon the liver than any other part. Arbutnot on Aliments.
PUS, n. f. [Latin.] The matter of a well digested fore.
Acrid substances break the vessels, and produce an ichor instead of laudable pus. Arbutnot.
TO PUSH, v. a. [pusher, Fr.]
1. To strike with a thrust.
If the ox push a man-servant, he shall be stoned. Ex. xxi.
2. To force or drive by impulse of any thing.
The youth push away my feet. Jeb. xxx. 12.
3. To force not by a quick blow, but by continued violence.
Shew your mended faiths,
To push destruction and perpetual flame
Out of the weak door of our fainting land. Shakep.
Through thee will we push down our enemies. Pf. xlv. 5.
Waters forcing way,
Sidelong had push'd a mountain from his seat,
Half sunk with all his pines. Milton.
The description of this terrible scene threw her into an hysterick fit, which might have proved dangerous, if Cornelius had not been push'd out of the room. Arbutnot and Pope.
4. To press forward.
He forewarns his care
With rules to push his fortune or to bear. Dryden.
With such impudence did he push this matter, that when he heard the cries of above a million of people begging for their bread, he termed it the clamours of faction. Addison.
Arts and sciences, in one and the same century, have arrived at great perfection, and no wonder, since every age has a kind of universal genius, which inclines those that live in it to some particular studies, the work then being pushed on by many hands, must go forward. Dryden.
5. To urge; to drive.
Ambition pushes the soul to such actions, as are apt to procure honour to the actor. Addison's Spectator.
6. To enforce; to drive to a conclusion.
We are push'd for an answer, and are forced at last freely to confess, that the corruptions of the administration were intolerable. Swift.
7. To importune; to tease.
TO PUSH, v. n.
1. To make a thrust.
But illues, ere the fight, his dread command,
That none shall dare
With shorted sword to stab in clover war,
Nor push with biting point, but strike at length. Dryden.
A calf will so manage his head, as though he would push with his horns even before they shoot. Roy.
Lambs, though they never saw the actions of their species, push with their foreheads, before the budding of a horn. Addison.
2. To make an effort.
War seem'd asleep for nine long years; at length
Both sides resolv'd to push, we try'd our strength. Dryden.
3. To make an attack.
The king of the South shall push at him, and the king of the North shall come against him. Dan. xi. 40.
PUSH, n. f. [from the verb.]
1. Thrust; the act of striking with a pointed instrument.

PUS

No might his corse be harmed
With dint of sword or push of pointed spear. Spenser.
So great was the puillance of his push,
That from his saddle quite he did him bear. Fa. Queen.
They, like resolute men, stood in the face of the breach, receiving them with deadly shot and push of pike, in such furious manner, that the Turks began to retire. Knolles.
2. An impulse; force impressed.
Jove was not more
With infant nature, when his spacious hand
Had rounded this huge ball of earth and seas
To give it the first push, and see it roll
Along the vast abyis. Addison's Guardian.
3. Assault; attack.
He gave his countenance against his name,
To laugh with gybing boys, and stand the push
Of every beardless vain comparative. Shakep. Henry IV.
When such a resistance is made, these bold talkers will draw in their horns, when their fierce and feeble pushes against truth are repelled with pushing and confidence. Watts.
4. A forcible struggle; a strong effort.
A sudden push gives them the overthrow;
Ride, ride, Messala. Shakep.
Away he goes, makes his push, stands the shock of a battle, and compounds for leaving of a leg behind him. L'Estrange.
We have beaten the French from all their advanced posts, and driven them into their last entrenchments: one vigorous push, one general assault will force the enemy to cry out for quarter. Addison.
5. Exigence; trial.
We'll put the matter to the present push. Shakep.
'Tis common to talk of dying for a friend; but when it comes to the push, 'tis no more than talk. L'Estrange.
The question we would put, is not whether the sacrament of the mass be as truly propitiatory, as those under the law? but whether it be as truly a sacrifice? if so, then it is a true proper sacrifice, and is not only commemorative or representative, as we are told at a push. Atterbury.
6. A sudden emergence.
There's time enough for that;
Left they desire, upon this push, to trouble
Your joys with like relation. Shakep. Winter's Tale.
7. [Pushula, Lat.] A pimple; an efflorescence; a wheal.
He that was praised to his hurt, should have a push rise upon his nose; as a blither will rise upon one's tongue, that tells a lye. Bacon's Essays.
PUSHER, n. f. [from push.] He who pushes forward.
PUSHING, adj. [from push.] Enterprising; vigorous.
PUSHPIN, n. f. [push and pin.] A child's play, in which pins are pushed alternately.
Men, that have wandering thoughts at the voice of wisdom out of the mouth of a philosopher, deserve as well to be whipt, as boys for playing at pushpins, when they should be learning. L'Estrange.
PUSILLANIMITY, n. f. [pusillanimitas, Fr. pusillus and animus, Lat.] Cowardice; meanness of spirit.
The property of your excellent therris is the warming of the blood, which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice. Shakep.
The Chinese sail where they will; which sheweth, that their law of keeping out strangers is a law of pusillanimity and fear. Bacon's New Atlantis.
It is obvious, to distinguish between an act of courage and an act of rashness, an act of pusillanimity and an act of great modesty or humility. South's Sermons.
PUSILLANIMOUS, adj. [pusillanimes, Fr. pusillus and animus, Lat.] Meanness of spirit; narrowminded; cowardly.
An argument fit for great princes, that neither by overmeasuring their forces, they lose themselves in vain enterprises; nor, by undervaluing them, descend to fearful and pusillanimous counsels. Bacon's Essays.
He became pusillanimous, and was easily ruffled with every little passion within; supine, and as openly exposed to any temptation from without. Woodward's Nat. Hist.
What greater instance can there be of a weak pusillanimous temper, than for a man to pass his whole life in opposition to his own sentiments. Spectator, N° 576.
PUSILLANIMOUSNESS, n. f. [from pusillanimous.] Meanness of spirit.
PUS, n. f. [I know not whence derived; pusio, Lat. is a dwarf.]
1. The fondling name of a cat.
A young fellow, in love with a cat, made it his humble suit to Venus to turn pus into a woman. L'Estrange.
Let pus practise what nature teaches. Watts.
I will permit my son to play at apodidracinda, which can be no other than our pus in a corner. Arbutnot and Pope.
2. The sportsman's term for a hare.
Poor honest pus,
It grieves my heart to see thee thus;
But hounds eat sheep as well as hares. Gay.
PUSTULE.
